Profile

Travis Armstrong is a partner at Hemming Morse and maintains offices in San Francisco and Chico. He has testified at trial and deposition as an expert in forensic accounting and economic damages. He regularly works on high-profile cases in the capacity of quantification of economic damages associated with breach of contract and theft of intellectual property, forensic accounting analyses associated with government-led investigations of consumer fraud, complex accounting analyses for securities litigation and post-acquisition disputes.

In 2016, Travis was appointed to the American Institute of CPA's (AICPA) Forensic and Litigation Services (FLS) Committee. This nine-member committee provides technical and educational guidance to CPA practitioners performing forensic accounting services, including investigations, economic damage analyses such as lost profits calculations, and a variety of other services. Additionally, Travis currently serves as one of three officers of California Society of CPA's (CalCPA) Forensic Services Section (FSS), previously served as the Chair of the Economic Damages section of CalCPA FSS, and served on CalCPA's Council.

His experience includes financial and accounting analyses associated with the restatement of quarterly and annual reports, development and management of complex economic damage models associated with breach of contract, intellectual property, antitrust and false claims litigation, and Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) due diligence and compliance testing for multi-national corporations in various foreign countries. Travis has also been engaged by government agencies to perform forensic accounting investigations in various industries, most notably, for-profit higher education and medical device.

Additionally, Travis actively supports legal services non-profits in the San Francisco Bay Area through his service on the Board of Legal Aid of Marin and past engagement with OneJustice.
